

the dentist that the tooth fairy will visit unless you have those molars polished or excavated. Whatever.

Landbase Australia reckon they will get your mail to you, come hell or the alternative. But their press release also covers some unusual possibilities, such as 'what happens when your postie forgets, goes on holiday or breaks a leg?'

Note: not if, but when. Well we thought Australia Post would have got another postie on the round. Anyway, Landbase Australia says they will get your mail to wherever and whenever you want it, without fail. And they have a special offer for new clients: 12 months registration for a six months fee. Tick this 'to do' off your checklist today and call Landbase Australia on 0408 686 461 or go to landbase.com.au email: landbase@landbase.com.au affair gone wrong, or just people taking a longish break and travelling overseas to take a gander at the Taj Mahal or the Eiffel Tower. They need their mail, because it might contain a cheque from a lawyer acting for the estate of a wealthy family member who's gone to higher places, or an 'all is forgiven' note from the wronged lover, even a reminder from

BE A CATCH CAN PRO

EXHAUST Gas Recirculation, Archibald, is not the art of sharing emissions after your beans-on-toast lunch with other occupants of your Range Rover. Rather, it's a little valve in the engine that helps to minimise exhaust emissions so we'll all live longer. The idea is the valves, called EGRs, yes, it stands for exhaust gas recirculation, send unburnt fuel back into the combustion chamber so it can have another go at being fed to a spark plug or two, and doing good, rather than evil. But they only last for a while before they get clogged with oil fumes, gunk, or whatever you want to call it, which can contaminate the EGR valve, inlet manifold, turbo bearings and intercooler. The result is less than wonderful: loss of power and efficiency, and possible engine damage. So Terrain Tamer is marketing a device with a strange name – Catch Can Pro. In short, it's a premium German-made oil fume filter with a replaceable filter element that protects the engine by filtering out damaging oil mist and condensation. That way, your engine will live longer too. And Archie can enjoy all the beans he wants. Get yours from any Terrain Tamer stockist or go to terraintamer.com.au

PROTECT YOUR NEW RANGA

If you've just thrown a wad down for the new PXII Ranger the last thing you want is anything else to dent your pride or joy, so the team at Irvin Bullbars have worked hard to design and build a bullbar that complies with ADR's as well as incorporating the Ranger's adaptive cruise control radar and foglights. With strength and practicality in mind, this bullbar will fit a decent set of spotties and offers full frontal protection. Four grades of aluminium are used in the construction of the stage 3 Irvin Bullbar, each being specifically selected for maximum strength and functionality as well as maximising corrosion resistance. Using traditional design and styling, the bullbar complements the Ranger's personality and achieves a fully integrated appearance with clean lines and plenty of airflow. As with all Irvin Bullbars, tubing size is 48 x 4.5mm wall thickness and is also in continuous sections which locks the bar together and makes for a stronger, more resilient bar. A heavy duty steel mounting system contributes to the overall strength and airbag compliance. Available in a high sheen polished alloy or a hard wearing baked enamel, Irvin Bullbars are made right here in Perth for a wide range of 4WDs. Check them out at www.irvinbullbars.com.au or call 9274 2511.
